On one side were the advocates of some form of guaranteed income. with which to offset the diminishing numbers of jobs which will be available as business and industrial activities become more cybernated. Opposing them were those who continue to believe that to pay persons not to work would ruin the moral fibre of the nation and the individ-

The high priest of the guaranteed income, Mr. Robert Theobald, presented his thesis that the link between income and work must be broken. He argued that in the age of cybernetics all the goods and services mankind will need will be furnished by a relatively small number of persons, thus severely shrinking job opportunities.

Cybernation of production, it should be noted, is not simply automation as it is now seen in many enterprises; it is the linking of computers with machines to the degree that they carry out work complete with decision making, as well as the use of computers to make decisions which would eliminate even large numbers of middle and upper management groups. Mr. Theobald and other economists of his school believe that business and industry will be forced to rely ever more heavily on cybernation to offset competitive

DEBATE ON A TOPIC WHICH writer Mr. Henry Hazlitt who deis bound to loom ever larger clared that a guaranteed income would be "an absolutely immoral proposition." Of the idea that a person unable to find work should be given "sufficient to live in dignity," Mr. Hazlitt declared that "it is apparently to be no business of the taxpayers if the recipient chooses nonetheless to live without dignity and to devote his guaranteed leisure to gambling, dissipation, drunkenness, debauchery, dope addiction or a life of crime."

As a counter-proposal, Mr. Hazlitt reached back into 19th century liberalism and suggested that any relief extended by government to an individual should be considered as a loan and the recipient should be deprived of his vote until it was re-

Even the generally conservative Chamber of Commerce audience was moved to snicker, according to news reports, at Mr. Hazlitt's suggestion. But whatever the merits of Mr. Theobald's ideas-and they are becoming more widely accepted as the ultimate effects of cybernation are slowly being recognized-Mr. Hazlitt did, in a perhaps exaggerated way, emphasize a problem that is likely to be even more troublesome than the division of incomes in an era when work becomes unneccessary for a large segment of the population. How will people employ their time in a socially and personally useful way?

The dismaying fact is that while the United States is right on the threshold of the new era, and Canada and other nations not far behind, recognition of the problems At the opposite pole from Mr. ahead is at a very low level among public and politicians.

Supreme Court Future at Stake?

MR. MACEACHEN'S pension legislation, providing for guaranteed income supplements, has exposed a dangerous split in the Conservative party on constitutional grounds. The pension field is not exclusive either to the provincial governments or to Ottawa. It is shared, although difficulty arises from the use in section 94A of the British North American Act of an extremely vague verb. According to the limiting part of that section, "No law made by the Parliament of Canada in relation to old age pensions shall affect the operation of any law present or future of a provincial legislature in relation to old age pensions."

There is no evident reason why the MacEachen bill should affect any provincial legislation sincerely intended to help old age pensioners. Its intent is not to keep provinces out of the field; indeed, there is positive encouragemen to them to stay in because provincial payments are not to count calculation of income. But a different situation might result if a provincial government, for reasons essentially political, set out to write legislation which the federal law could be shown to affect.

It was this possibility which Mr. Baldwin, member for Peace River, had in mind when he suggested a reference the Supreme Court of Canada. The fact is that Premier Johnson of Quebec objects not merely to Mr. MacEachen's bill but, as he indicated through the recent Quebec speech from the throne, to the presence of the federal government in what he considers a provincial field, Mr. Johnson's legislation may, therefore, be a welfare measure directed to a political objective which is, unhappily, shared by the Liberal opposition in his

Useless?

Such a reference would have to await the appearance of the Johnson legislation since the court would not otherwise be in a position to offer a very helpful opinion.

Mr. Baldwin's doubts are not lightly to be dismissed; as a serious student of the constitution, he enjoys great respect in the House. The position which he sets out was, however, immediately undernined by Quebec Conservatives in alliance with an independent formerly of their ranks, Their argument was anticonstitutionalist and totally unacceptable to the member for Peace River.

A former Conservative minister, now on the front bench, put the matter most clearly. Mr. Martial Asselin aid:

"I must point out to the honorable member for Peace River that the premier of the province of Quebec stated before the Quebec legislature that the province of Quebec would not recognize the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court in this matter and that a decision by that court on old age security would not be valid. And this brings me to say that, as a matter of fact, in the province of Quebec, the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court would not be recognized by provincial authorities, nor by the majority of the people, concerning constitutional jurisdiction in any field whatsoever, as to whether it belongs to the province of Quebec or to the federal

Crux of Reference

"I believe it would be useless for the cabinet to refer this question to the Supreme Court, since the present premier of Quebec and even Mr. Lesage when he was premier of the province, have often questioned the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court and the validity of its decisions as regards the constitutional character of our legislation. I believe it is useless for the cabinet to ask for the opinion of the Supreme Court."

Another Conservative, Mr. Beaulieu (for 16 years a minister of the Quebec government) supported Mr. Asselin. 'The court in question," he asserted, "is organized and appointed by the federal government; consequently it cannot be a good judge in such a delicate and important field."

Remarkably, this anti-constitutionalist argument was backed by Mr. Allard of Sherbrooke, who is a professor of constitutional law. According to him: "The Supreme Court, with due respect to its honourable members, is not a body which can rule on constitutional opinions and conflicts between the central and provincial governments within the federative system in which we are living. In a federative system, the central government as well as the provincial governments are equal and autonomous in their respective responsibilities. A body appointed by one level of government is not apt to rule on conflicts which the central and provincial governments.

For Mr. Baldwin these arguments amount in effect to an assertion that it is proper to respect some parts of the constitution but not others. For whether Mr. Allard likes it or not, the Supreme Court is part of our constitution. It has in fact been ruling in such matters as the final court since appeals to the Privy Council were abolished in 1949.

Faced with anti-constitutionalist opposition, the federal government nothing to lose and everything to gain by proceeding with the bill. Assuming that Mr. Johnson enacts conflicting legislation, he will then have two choices. He may appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, thus implicity recognizing it a desirable result. (The court might be asked at the same time whether there is a right in a province unilaterally to tear up the Canadian constitution by denying its jurisdiction). Alternatively Mr. Johnson might stick to his interesting principles and ignore the court. In that event there would be nothing to prevent the federal government from simply ignoring Mr. Johnson and the Quebec legislation. How, as a practical matter, does Mr. Johnson propose to prevent Ottawa from paying supplements to Quebec old age pensioners if he is not prepared to go to court: There are no doubt ways in which could penalize recipients although this would not appear the most promising means of winning friends and votes in Quebec province.

But no one would deny the importance of this emerging issue. The future of the Supreme Court of Canada may in fact be the most important issue now visible on the political horizon of Canada.

The Directors of the Community-Chest and members of the 1966 United Appeal Campaign Organization would appreciate your assistance in passing on to the people of the Greater Victoria area, our thanks for the generous support which made possible another successful fund drive on behalf of our 21 member agencies. Tabulations to date indicate that the campaign will exceed its $452,000 goal by a few hundred dollars, thereby ensuring that vital services in the fields of health, velfare, recreation and youth guidance will continue to be available to the citizens of our Community throughout the coming year.

Raising this large amount of money is not an easy task, and would be impossible were it not for the time and effort put into it by the thousands of volunteers who worked so willingly and well for the United Appeal this year. To these dedicated men and women and to each donor to the Appeal, firms and individuals alike, we owe a large debt of gratitude. - Graham E. McCall, President. #### China's Ferment Becomes Less 'Curiouser

SUPPOSE that one fine morning, Sec-retary of State Dean Rusk had been Far from it! As though to show he was formally denounced by White House press secretary Bill Moyers as a traitor to the country and a betrayer of the president. It would then cause rather widespread surprise if Secretary Rusk remained in full possession of all his powers and duties at State Denart ment. Yet this is an almost exact parallel something that happened last week in Peking, where the course of events daily grows curiouser and curiouser, in Alice's classic phrase.

The persons denounced were the two old-line bosses of the Communist party apparatus, the official Chinese head of state. Liu Shao-chi, and the party secretary, Teng Hsiao-ping. Their denouncer was the propaganda minister and member of the standing committee of the politburo, Tao Chu, who was quite certainly speaking for Mao Tse-tung and Mao's designated heir, Marshal Lin Piao.

As Teng and Liu were accused by name of doing "poisonous damage," "violating Mao's thought," and "implementing" a bourgeois line, you might suppose they would have lost their jobs. still doing business at the old stand, Teng Hsiao-ping appeared in public and in his official capacity, at a party funeral for an old comrade that took place the very next day after the denunciation.

How can such things be? That is the natural question; and fortunately a rather clear answer has at last been provided, partly by the Tao Chu speech, partly by a just-leaked secret speech and partly by other official documents, On other occasions. Mao's "great proletarian cultural revolution" has been described as a kind of "coup de main," directed by or at least approved by Mao, and aimed against Mao's own government. It now appears that there was a grave miscalculation after the "coup de main" was ordered. Success was assumed when the "cultural revolution" was well launched in late spring, and Mao therefore left Peking to rest in the country.

"When Mao was away from Peking," said Tao Chu, "Liu and Teng violated Mao's policy line, implemented the bourgeois policy line, and suppressed the revolutionary movement . . . They issued orders in the name of the party center,

(and) their poisonous damage has spread very widely."

Thus it is now clear that these two key men, the official head of state and the party secretary, seized the opportunity of Mao's absence from the capital to send out to the whole party apparatus, all over China, the signal to resist the cultural revolution" at all costs. This in turn necessitated the central committee meeting in early August, which had to be packed and intimidated in order to overcome the influence of the two party

This was the occasion of Lin Piao's secret speech, in the course of which he announced a root-and-branch purge of the party and government. The Red Guards were then unleashed to effect the purge, quite clearly because the resistance was too strong to permit reliance on normal instruments of government.

Impressive Resistance

But it is also clear that at least up to w, the resistance organized by Teng Hsrapping and Liu Shao-chi has been too strong for the Red Guards. In only one province, Heilunkiang, has the party apparatus been made over in the desired manner: and in Heilungkiang, if one may judge by a speech by Chou En-lai, also recently leaked, the Red Guards themselves are so out of control that they must be implored rather than com-

In Peking, meanwhile, Liu and Teng have evidently maintained and protected themselves by organizing their own paramilitary support. This is the only possible explanation of their survival, and it is also the only possible interpretation of a recent "Red Flag" editorial attacking "those in authority (who) stay back of the screen and pull strings of mass organizations of students and workers who have been blinded by them, sow discord, create factions, instigate struggles by force and even resort to all kinds of illegal means to deal with the revolutionary masses.

Both sides, in short, now have their private armies; and meanwhile, one must assume, the People's Liberation Army is too internally divided to be usable by either side. In the same speech already quoted. Tao Chu actually seemed to be calling for a general rising throughout China as the only way out of this lurid stalemate.

"In order to achieve new victories," he proclaimed, "(the cultural revolution) must spread to the farms and factories and thoroughly smash the reactionary bourgeois policy line."

From such signs, one may well conclude that Mao Tse-tung's regime is now in serious danger from within, as Stanley Karnow has suggested from Hong Kong.

effort to enforce American concepts of peace, prosperity and democracy in Asia and Latin America.

What we should have learned out of the failures of past crusades — and it may he that most Europeans have learned it - is that we are neither strong enough nor wise enough to make the whole world into a paradise; that the West represents only one of the world's great civilizations, the most powerful and creative of the modern era, but one which while neither better nor worse than religious sense, has the means to bring about a revolutionary change in the attitudes of peoples by wise and humane leadership.

The kind of responsibility that is appropriate for the West today is of a different kind altogether from the arrogant messianism of the failing to fulfil them.

Finally, and most urgently, it is our responsibility as the entors of aggressive nationalism, crusading ideology and nuclear weapons, to take the initiative in an effort to gain control of these awful forces which we have set loose upon the world and which now threaten it with universal destruction.

It is hard to believe in the destruction of race. Because we have managed to avoid a holocaust since the invention of nuclear veapons only a little more than 20 years ago, the danger of its occurence now seems remote and references to it have become so frequent and familiar as to lose their have accepted the idea that the avoidance of nuclear war is a matter of skillful "crisis management," as though the techniques of diplomacy and deterrence which have gotten us through the last 20 years have only to be improved upon to get us through the next 20 or 100 or 1,000 years.

Act as Though There's No Threat

It is a fine thing of course that the hydrogen bomb has not reduced us all to nervous wrecks, but it is not a fine thing that, finding the threat incredible, we act as though it did not exist and go on conducting international relations in the traditional manner, which is to say, in a manner that does little if to reduce the posanything sibility of a catastrophe.

The law of averages has already been more than kind to us and we have had some very close calls, notably in October, 1962.

We escaped a nuclear war at the time of the Cuban missile affair because of President Kennedy's skillful "crisis management" and Khrushchev's prudent response to it; surely we cannot count on the indefinite survival of the human race if it must depend on an indefinite number of repetitions of that sort of ounter.

an extremist or incompetent will come to power in one major country or another, or misjudgment will be made by some perfectly competent official, or things will just get out of hand without anyone being precisely responsible, as happened in 1914.

None of us, however, has yet undertaken a serious and concerted effort to put the survival of our species on some more solid foundation than an unending series of

Need To Regulate Human Nature

We have got somehow to try destruction - by some means other than actually experi-encing it. We have got somehow to grasp the idea that man's competitive instinct, unalterable an element of human nature though it may be, must nonetheless be re-strained, regulated or redirected in such a way that it no longer threatens to explode into universal, final violence.

Twice in this century honest, hopeful but thus far sful efforts have been made to bring unrestrained national rivairies under the civilized rules of an international community.

These two efforts, the League of Nations and the United Nations, were born of the breakdown of traditional techniques of international relations in the two world wars. making it work.

Part' of the explanation is simply that there is less blurring and interference with vision at a great height. Just as one can see the bottom of a shallow sea easily from an aircraft, although it seems opaque if you look over the side of a boat on the surface, so vision through the atmos phere is commonly affected by local turbulence, and dust which scatters and reflects light. From orbital heights, on the other hand, these disturbances barely operate.

However, the astronauts visual improvement is too good to be explained by these factors alone, and there seem to be definite but still unexplained enhancements in the performance of the eye

Close Link

One theory is that this is linked with weightlessness. Our sense of balance and direction of gravity is linked with the organs of the inner ear: but the sense of balance and the sense of sight are also more intimately linked than is often realized. It is not so easy to stand upright without swaying if closed, especially on a moving surface like a ship or a train. Stimulation of the inner ear and some disorders can make the eyes flick back and forth. In the weightless condition orbit, the normal interaction between inner ear and the eye is disrupted. It is possible that this may enable the eye to perform more efficiently the tiny scanning movements which are part of normal vision,

If you try to look fixedly at small target, an observer will see your eyes repeatedly drift off target and then flick back. In addition, there are frequent more or less random flicks, and a tiny tremor, only detectable with special instruments, whereby the eyeball whereby the weightless eye-vibrates 15 to 100 times a ball can merely move more

These movements are intimately connected with subtle process of vision. For example, the retina which is sensitive to light needs - a constantly changing pattern be any seeing at all.

This has been demonstrated by experiments using special image is fixed relative to the retina, so that when the eyeball moves the image ves correspondingly. This makes any scanning impossible - and the curious result is that the subject goes nporarily blind. The image fades from sight and there is only a blank. It may reappear and then disappear again repeatedly. But it is impossible to see consistently without being able to move a scene across the retina by constant scanning, flickering

There is no final explanation et, but the phenomenon itself is now beyond doubt. The long series of Gemini flights which have involved tests with special targets laid out on the ground .clusively that orbiting astronauts can see quite surprising amounts of detail on the ground below as they circle the earth.

This is stimulating considerable new research on the balance and vision. More than four in ten Canadians believe that labor is being unwisely led today and the main reason for this judgment is "too many strikes." In a recent study it was established that 44% of the population expressed disapproval of labor leadership. A further question was asked this same segment of people: "Why do you feel this way?"

Most-quoted reason was not only to blame labor leaders for the increasing number of work stoppages but also because the strikes were called against the wishes of many union members.

Voters resent the high salaries paid to union leaders and the power invested in them. Some people complain that the demands made by labor leaders are unreasonable and irresponsible.

Brown claims' membership is 300, predicts 50,000 in six months.

How come? Well, because people are "sick to death of our wobbly-kneed government giving in to the blackmail of 75 Quebec seats,' he says. And civil servants bitterly resent m, but won't speak out for fear of being fired.

Bulldog will resist for them. Brown is driving for membership among civil servants with a promise of anonymity, and hopes to

His keep-Canada-English plan doesn't include Quebec. He would let Quebec opt for "But we can't let such an unstable group of people — and they are unstable — run our country by blackmail," he says.

Brown is less than clear on how he's going to do all this. "We'll have to work out lawful techniques of opposition," he says. "We'll demonstrate, but with nothing on our placards except a symbolic bulldog. We want the support of English Canada without stirring up the opposition of French Canada."

The Bulldogs are especially annoyed by bilingual breakfast food boxes and business forms. They'll cross out the French every chance they get, and thereby hope to foul up office machine operations. "The guy who thought of this was a genius," Brown chortles. But don't be alarmed; the Bulldogs are opposed to violence. No civil disobedience. 'Stern measures," yes, but only those that are lawful. In this context, Brown is in favor of stern measures "to bring Quebec in line, and if that involved the use of troops, we'd agree." As for unification of the armed forces, the Bulldogs are against it. The reason for unification, Brown enlightened me, isn't efficiency or economy, but because Quebec wants to abolish the army, navy and air force with their Queen-and-Empire traditions of English culture.

"I'm not anti-French," Brown reassured me. "I'm not against bilingualism; only against being forced. I'm studying German. And I speak some French. Actually there are some good French terms," he explained, "Like fait accompli, and coup d'etat.'

A Hardy Pioneering Spirit Under the Electric Blanket

By ART STOTT

Since the last report on my dream life — some years ago now — I have developed a few refinements in the fantasies I create between touching my head down on the pillow and falling asleep at night. As my friends know, my imagination builds log cabins during those brief Over a period of years my fancy has constructed a number of these small houses in places I know or on sites that are invented. Some of my better loca-tions are on hillsides overlooking sheltered bays. Behind and above my invented house is a spring-fed stream which I divert into a neighboring depression to form a lake for summer swimming and abounding in trout. The stream itself has enough fall to permit installation of a water-wheel. As it turns I develop sufficient electricity from it to give me juice for some of the minor amenities, like light, heat and television. It is beyond me to explain the generating system. I know nothing about power or its production, though I'm working on that as a side issue in by dream

Basically, however, work on my log cabins serves to bring home to me the simplicities of living. It is enough, for my peace of mind, to erect the shelters, make them snug and place them in a region where I can live on the country. The latter is a tall order. I don't eat fish. I've hunted only once in my life and I don't enjoy gardening. However, a goat — and I'll learn how to milk it, in a speculative sort way — figures in the subsistence picture. At all events, I find the practice highly satisfying. It takes me from the tension-forming hustle of modern living and impresses me the importance of the prime essentials. Food and shelter are the ingredients of this philosophy. And in the drowsy efficiency I acquire, head on pillow, I'm competent to provide them. Having established my pioneering capabilities. I roll over, turn my electric blanket down from high to "2" and sink into-slumber. This is the way to enjoy the basics of existence, your

Walter Mitty did this sort of thing rather well. So does "Snoopy" when he launches himself from the ridgepole of his dog house as the World War-One flying ace in his Sopwith

Camel.

It doesn't worry me too much that I never actually build a log house, that the structure never emerges from the semi-conscious dream.

All I'm doing is weaving state of near sleep. All I'm doing is weaving a sort of philosophical cocoon, a speculative process in which most of us indulge.

It seems to me that our so-called western society is full of people of good will who dream their dreams of a better world. We accept it as a fundamental element in our way of life that we should stretch out a hand to those who need help. We should make our obeisance to the recognized virtues. We should extend charity within our power. We should go the extra mile. We should bend our efforts to care for the very young and innocent, for the elderly and handicapped. We should practice brotherly love. We should do what we can to lift up the gaze of others to the hills whence comes peace. There are those among us who pray to be forgiven for trespasses because, they say, they forgive others who trespass against them. We can recite the Golden Rule with a fair understanding of its meaning.

And when we've taken into consideration all the factors which we know would make us the kind of people we'd like to be, we decide to live accordingly — just so long as there's no discomfort attached to the process, no need for extra effort, no painful sacrifice involved.

If this way of looking at things, of missing the target of ideals, worries the odd conscientious individual, leaves in him or her a small sense of fraud, it shouldn't disturb the person's sleep.

Any trace of insomnia can be overcome by metaphorically building log cabins from the pillow, getting down to basics — and membering, of course, to adjust the electric blanket just before slumber comes.

Peewees Get Top Support

If support from the top can impress the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, Quebec's disappointed peewee players may still get their trip to Europe.

Trade Minister Robert Winters has asked the CAHA to reconsider its recent decision barring two Quebec peewee clubs from toucing Europe during the centennial year as representatives of Expo 67.

Intercession by Winters was announced early today in the Commons by his parliamentary secretary, Jean-Charles Cantin, who was replying to a question raised by M. J. A. Mongrain (Ind. Trois Rivieres) during an after-midnight adjournment debate on the subject.

Mongrain said the CAHA action was taken in accordance with standing regulations, but added that its motivation was "This is an exceptional case which should bring the CAHA to put aside its standing regulations in order to render a decision," Mongrain contended. Cantin replied that, in his representations to the CAHA, Winters, the federal minister responsible for the 1967 World's Fair in Montreal, had stressed that he considered it an

PORTLAND - No replacements were in sight for their walking wounded but Victoria Maple Leafs were still hoping to wind up a five-game Western Hockey League road trip with a winning margin when they tangle with the Portland Buckaroos to-

Plagued with troubles this season, the Leafs ran into more misery at Los Angeles Tuesday They were blanked for the first time in 60 games as they dropped a 4-0 decision to the Blades. They also added two more names to their list of injured players.

Defeat, which left them with two wins and two losses in the games of their trip, cost the Victorians a chance to share fourth place. That was only a minor part of

Centre Milan Marcetta, the club's top scorer who was just hitting top form, suffered a mild concussion and two-stitch cut, and goalie Al Smith needed five stitches in his neck after being cut by Willie O'Ree's

SI BILLION SHIPPED

During the past 18 months, the United States has shipped India $1 billion worth of food, giving some of it outright and taking payment for the rest in Indian rupees, which are of very limited use. The rest of the world, during this same period, sent only $150 million in food adid and asked for hard cash for most of it.

U.S. officials here pinpointed two major reasons for their concern over the situation.

History Of Carols Traced

By ELIZABETH FORBES This is the season of the their curious blending of Yuletide festivity and religious symbolism.

In churches, on street corners, in municipal buildings and in our stores, we hear the Christmas story told over and over again in verse and mlody. Few radio or television programs are complete without some carols during the festive season. And the voices of the singers coupled with the sound of music is carried over the by Father Jean de Brebeuf, the intrepld missionary. According to early descendants of his converts he wrote the carol hymn, named it taught it to their ancestors.

* * * Much later an English translation (printed in full in the Times Weekend magazine last Saturday) was made by J. E. Middleton which places it something in the vein of While Shepherds Watched

Their Flocks By Night.
In the original words however and in the translation, shepherds become "wandering hunters" who heard the angel hunters" who heard the angel voices that "Mighty Gitchi Manitou" had sent to proclaim the birth of the Babe. In place of the manger and stable it is "within a lodge of broken bark" and the little process wranged in "a robe one was wrapped in "a robe of rabbit skin."

During his early work with the Hurons Father Brebeuf wrote in a report to his superior: "The Indians have a particular devotion for the night that was enlightened by the birth of the Son of God.

"They built a small chapel of cedar and fir branches in honor of the manger of the honor of the manger of the Infant Jesus . . . Even those who were at a distance of more than two days' journey met at a given place to sing hymns in honor of the newborn Child."

No doubt the songs included the hymn he had written in their own language.

As you will remember from your bouts with Canadian history, a party of Iroquois, traditional enemies of the Hurons, descended upon them in March, 1649. The Hurons were outnumbered and overcome and Father de Brebeuf and his companion Father Gabriel Lalemant were tortured and burned at the

A remnant of the Hurons escaped and through them the Brebeuf carol was preserved. They settled at Lorette in 1650 and nearly 100 years SJ., who was stationed there from 1747 to 1794, heard the song and wrote it down.

Much later again Middleton made his translation. * * *

Carol singing came to Can-ada not only with the early hymns of the first missionaries but with our French and English ancestors who had known this form of music and in their homelands. From then it has come down to us as a happy custom to preserve and cherish now and in the future. * * *

So it is that on our streets, in our stores, our home and over the air, we hear again at this season the words and music that directly or in-directly proclaim, "Glory to directly proclaim, God in the highest, and on earth, peace and goodwill to men."

Certainly we're far from achieving that peace at the moment, but we can hope and we can pray ... and we can sing!

FENCE SITTING is preferable to pavement walking in Lake Cowichan where several roads are still covered by up to two feet of water. This youngster manages to stay high and dry while traffic has to plow through the floods. At right, Archie Irwin,

Flood Waters Subside But More Rain Coming

Flood Victim Organizing Petition Drive

LAKE COWICHAN-Ernest Ardley, a victim of Cowichan Lake flood waters, is trying to organize a petition urging government action.

He wants the lake flood water diverted west to the Nitinat River and out to the Pacific Ocean.

"A channel 30 feet wide and taking 10 feet of water would take away the whole flood threat," he said. "It's only a mile from the head of the Cowichan Lake to the divide where the water starts flowing west. "If the federal government would contract the work out to the logging companies who know what they're doing it would be cheaper and quicker."

TALKING UP'

Mr. Ardley, a member of the Lake Chamber of Commerce, said he is "talking up" the idea of a petition.

'Action to divert the water to the Nitinat would help Duncan as well and I hope we can get support from them."

General C. A. P. Murison, Duncan, chairman of Cowichan-Kosksilah flood control committee, said no cost figure of the Nitinat scheme has even been released to him.

He said an alternative plan to control the flooding at the Cowichn-Koksilah delta would probably cost $1,000,000 now. In 1961 the cost was estimated at $450,000.

This plan called for straightening of the river beds, separating the Cowichan and Koksilah rivers at their mouths, and altering bridges. STILL ALIVE

General Murison said: "The committee at its last meeting decided to remain in being. I'm not taking the initiative in reactivating it but would be delighted to do so if asked by the interested parties."

Lake Cowichn is not repre-sented on the committee, and Mrs. Mildred Child, chairman of the village commission, said she would not commit herself to any interest in the Nitinat plan until her council

Reeve Donald Morton, North Cowichan, who served on the committee, said there would be no useful purpose reactivating the committee unless there is complete in-volvement of the Indian affairs department

By DON DINGWALL

LAKE COWICHAN-Two days without rain and a heavy overnight frost have made an "unbelievable" change in flood conditions here.

Village clerk Bill Chappell said the flood water dropped dramatically overnight but there is still up to two feet of water on several vallage streets. Homes in the hard-hit Riverside Drive area still have water in their basements. And the forecast for Thursday is more rain. Mr. Chappell said until people return to their homes it will be difficult to assess damage but he estimated it would run into thousands of dollars. In a number of Riverside homes, lino and floor tiles have lifted, wall panels buckled and carpets ruined.

. Erme Ardley, an evacuated resident of Riverside Drive said there is still four feet of water in front of his home. He said: "I hope to move back tonight but won't if I can't get the furnace going.

The water is running off very quickly now although some of the roads are still covered." An example of a badly hit family is the Gus Johnsons of Riverside Drive who have just completely redecorated their home. The Honeymoon Bay sawmill of Western Forest Indus tries Ltd. is going back on full production starting at 6 p.m.

today following two days of layoffs. This will put 300 men back to work.

Don Hammond, plant superintendent, said: "The lake has gone down 10 inches from its high point.

"Although there are still five inches of water over our pumphouse we will be able to get the power back later today."

Because of the damage to the booming ground dock at Honeymoon Bay, the 110 men of the company's Gordon River logging camp will be idled until Friday.

The B.C. Forest Products Ltd. sawmill and veneer plant at Youbou has been on full production since Tues-

It was idled Monday because of flood water in the basement powerhouse. Gordon Winter, personnel manager, said: "The lake is going down steadily and things have greatly improved.

the main topics of conversation within the industry in

A prime candidate for runaway honors is "Rat Patrol" which shot the first 17 episodes in Spain. The production company is now back in roduction company is now back in California but threatening to go hack to Spain because of cost. Lee Rich, president of Mirisch-Rich TV, contends that Hollywood unions and guilds are creating additional labor costs. He has charged that on every one of the first four shows shot upon return-from Europe, he has been forced over-budget, despite the fact that he has held to a four-day shooting

Hollywood, but he wants co-operation from the unions so that the shows can be brought in at a reasonable.

However, there is also something else to be said about producing television series in places other than now guiding light of the popular "I Spy" series, told his counterparts in Hollywood that I Spy is shot all over the world because of "outworn, obsolete" production techniques employed in Hollywood today.

Leonard claims that while European workers, for instance, are inferior to their American counterparts, in many cases the equipment given them to use gives them an advantage.

But the upshot of everyone's thinking in Hollywood is general agreement that what is known as "runaway" production is where the producer goes abroad for one reason — the cheaper labor costs.

TIDBITS — NBC-TV has extended Walt Disney's

Wonderful World of Color through 1968-69 season CBS-TV has slammed the door in the faces of Hollywood film studios and producers who turn out program pictures running under 100 minutes. The reason is because of rigid time slots followed by the network.

NBC-TV is a little more lenient in this regard

When its movies run slightly short, it uses film fillers . . . David Janssen, star of The Fugitive, has been voted West Germany's most popular foreign TV star . Frank Sinatra special No. 2 will be re-run on CBS-TV

New Fisheries Ship Equipped For Many Jobs

By JOHN SOOSAR

HALIFAX (CP) - Canada's west fisheries vessel, the E. Prince, is a unique com-nation of fishing craft and scientific instrument.

Built at a cost of $1,400,000. the Prince is equipped for therr-trawling, scallop dragging and longlining. It also has three laboratories for fish handling, ceientific analysis and hydrographic studies.

On a tour of the vessel here, Dr. F. R. Hayes of Ottawa, chairman of the Fisheries Research Board of Canada, described the Prince as a "versa-scribed the P tile experimental" craft able to handle biological work as well as hydrographic studies.

He said the vessel's versatility will eliminate the necesity of chartering privately - owned trawlers for research work. The sleek appearance of the

It has paid so handsomely that his restless spirit now sees him engaged in the major facelifting job of one of Victoria's historic hotels — and, very directly, a major boost for the first urban renewal

Plans Still Secret

Hard on his heels in the private investors bid to reprivate investors bid to re-store Bastion Square to its former glory is MacLab with its Board of Trade Building project which, though still secret in detail, is expected to attract yet more private capital to the Bastion area.

MacLab is not a new name in city business circles. The firm is better known, perhaps, for its major investment in Goodacre Towers, north and south, at 350 Douglas Street.

The north tower with its 115 suites and the south tower with 83 suites makes a substantial contribution to the derbird Park, once destined to be an apartment block but now the Queen Victoria Inn, is registered in the name of Carmel Holdings, a nother mainland firm. The list of "foreign" investments in the city is almost endless, although most of the outside cash is confined to the big projects, while local in-vestors are confined to one or two major apartment blocks such as Parkside Apartments and 50 per cent of Executive House.

In recent months tight money has cooled the ardor of even the prairie companies. In 1966 for example, only eight high-rise blocks have been started or built with the largest, Royal Arms, 1300 Yates, containing 76 suites

It's a Far Cry

It is a far cry from the booming years of 1963-64 when 46 apartment buildings were completed or started ranging from the 10-suite Eulena, 1025 Pakington Street, to the massive Executive House with its 125 suites and 32 hotel

The boom continued at a slightly slower pace in 1965 with 23 apartments completed or started in the city.

What does an apartment mean to Victoria in dollars and cents?

The answer isn't easy to pinpoint specifically, Much depends on the construction of the apartment building and whether it be of low-cost construction whether it can be classified in the luxury-suite class.

But a fair average cost per suite in a high-rise is listed by major contractors as running around $10,000 a suite with a 100-suite apartment costing $1

Tax-wise the annual return to the city is equally difficult to pinpoint because, again due to the type of construction and finish, assessments will

Tax Payments Heavy

But a round approximation based on a 100-suite apartment would result in tax payments of around $28,000 a

The city does not keep separate track of taxes paid by apartment owners, breaking tax payments down into three categories only, resi-dential, industrial and commercial. But round-figure estimates place annual tax payments from apartment owners in the neighborhood of $500,000—or slightly more ley tends to worry when such large sums paid yearly into the city treasury are mentioned.

"You should make it clear that we don't just receive those taxes as cream off the top," he said. "Every apartment block built costs the city extra money for sewers, roads, traffic control, police and fire protection and many other services." But even Mr. Bramley admits that the high-rise boom, although sluggish WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ac-during the past 12 months, has made the city a more attractive and better place to

Arthur Mayse

A smart new couple sheathed in gleaming white enamel have taken up permanent residence in our basement. They are washer and dryer as their maker ordained them, and they are going to change the shape of Monday for my wife.

We should be glad and indeed though wash-days will henceforward seem kind of tame. It will be

Whatever else may be said for our old machine—gone now, heaved casually into the back of a truck-with her Cyclops eye of a loading port glowering reproaches — she served us beyond our expectations or even our hopes. Crotchety though she was, she took no stock in panned obso lescence, and kept on chipping buttons to the very end,

She arrived at our Toronto house a few days ahead of our daughter. Win fed her a load caughter. Win fed her a load of laundry. Rejoicing at such labor-saving efficiency, we watched her perform her routine with never a hitch.

Next week, Win was in hospital with the little creature in anticipation of whom we'd bought the Bendix; and I was left to put the machine through her paces

At intervals I heard her change gears, and once she seemed to be hitting a pretty fast lick. But when I went down to check an hour or so later, all seemed will. The Bendix had shut herself off, and stood meekly in her corner with an air of duty

The sheets were okay, and so were the pillow slips. But the shirt I'd entrusted to her was bare of buttons, and in a lit of what I could only interpret as malice, the robot had dismembered a pair of Ron's shorts by plucking each eam apart.

This incident shook me considerably. It was plain that, like some dogs, this faithful slave would tolerate only the touch of a woman's hand.

She came to Victoria with gear. Arrived here, she made necessary by the change from Toronto's then direct current to our alternat-

"They just aren't making them like that any more," he declared with convincing fervor.

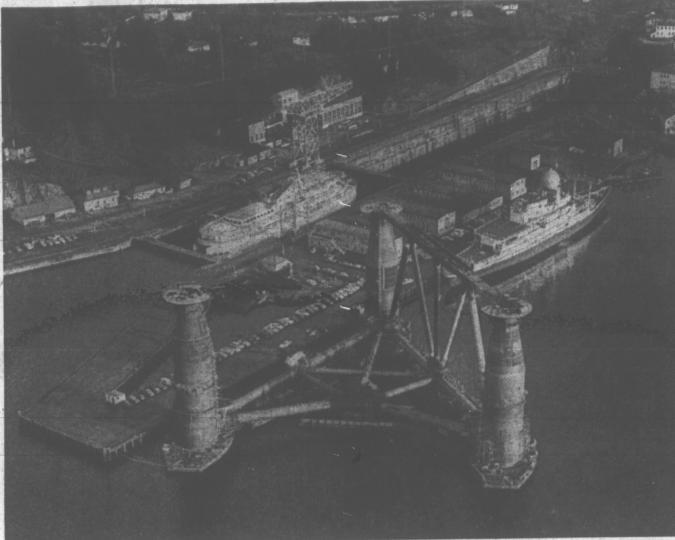

From there on, despite all we and he could do, her road ran mostly downhill. There would be a brief recovery, then the old lady would blow her pump or devour her bushings, or develop some other exotic illness. Her voice, once an even hum, became by degrees peevish chatter.

One morning when she was 13 turned, she began to clank and wallop as she hadn't even when given kid jeans with a couple of marbles left in the pockets.

Said the repairman, who by now seemed attached to her as we were, "This time, I'm afraid it's her main bearing." We were enjoying a per-sonal recession that spring, and the overhaul was cheaper than a new washer. So we nursed her along, meaning to retire her next time we hit it lucky and always when we made a strike, finding more immediate or at least more interesting uses for our spell, Win kept her going with pats and endearments. But she'd had her day, and last week, we permitted her to gasp her last.

When the truck took her away, she had racked up 19 years of service — a figure which must surely be a nearrecord even for her sturdy

The caissons also function as the stabilizing device when the vessel is moored on station. By flooding or pumping water ballast in or out of the caissons, the rig's depth in the sea can be controlled. VMD is due to finish the vessel in the spring and Shell is planning to begin offshore oil exploration off the west coast of Vancouver Island soon after.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Last-Minute Touches To the Holiday Scene By Penny Saver

Christmas shoppers come in a number of categories. There are those organized people who have all their shopping done, or almost done, a month ahead of time. The other extreme is the group of late-late shoppers. These people storm into shops on the last few hours before the big day, frantically searching for gifts, goodies and holiday treats.

If you're in a last-minute panic, one shop has the answer to one of the aames on your list. It's a little item for the girl on the go. This little metal container is a purse hairspray bottle. Tiny and neat, this looks just like a lipstick tube. To fill this wonder, place the bottom part over your can of hairspray. Press down, and the tube fills up. These are bound to become a necessity in every woman's make-up kit. Price is $3.

For the gal who wants to look her loveliest for the holiday season, especially one who will be entertaining, focus the last-minute touches on the hands. Make long nails dazzling with the nail polish that I found. Glittery and sparkling, this polish comes in gold, silver and copper gitter. This is the perfect holiday touch for the charming hostess. Price is $1.25 the bottle. It's an idea for a stocking stuffer for the teenager in your household, Extra-special gift wrap is something that you shouldn't be without, especially now at the last minute. Luxurious wrapping paper in one shop has a velvet design. The smooth fabric on a paper background makes an elegant package. This comes in three different color schemes—red velvet on gold paper, the same red velvet on green, and green velvet on gold. Two sheets of paper, 20 by 26 inches around, sell for 50 cents.

Want to know where Penny found these last-minute touches to the festive scene? Give her a call at 382-3131.
